

Credentialing for Excellence

Advanced Tools & Techniques

Susan Lapenta

Lauren Massucci

HORTY  SPRINGER

Jointly sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine Center for Continuing Education in the Health Sciences and HortySpringer Seminars.

The University of Pittsburgh is an affirmative action, equal opportunity institution.

TOPICS

Faculty, Susan Lapenta and Lauren Massucci use a unique approach by combining “credentialing lessons” with active participation by attendees in solving challenging credentialing issues. We will cover the following exercises and topics during the seminar:

Join Our Credentials Committee Meeting

Attendees will participate in a mock Credentials Committee meeting in which they will learn how to use a number of credentialing skills and techniques, including:

- spotting red flags in an actual application;
- determining whether an applicant meets threshold eligibility criteria; and
- reappointing a low/no volume practitioner.

“I Wish I Had Your Bylaws”

If you think that all medical staff bylaws documents are the same, your opinion will most likely change after you join us in playing a thought-provoking game about bylaws in which you see how the bylaws documents of two hospitals match up when put to the test of real-life scenarios. You will learn that medical staff bylaws documents can be your “best friend” or “worst enemy.” There’s a prize for everyone who plays: excellent bylaws language that you can take home with you.

Credentialing in an Employment World

The push by hospitals and affiliated entities to employ more physicians can cause headaches for those involved in the credentialing process, especially when employment decisions are made before the credentialing process begins. We’ll offer pointers on how to better align your employment and credentialing process and information sharing.

Clinical Privileges – Who Can Do What in Your Hospital?

Using interactive case studies, we’ll address difficult to manage clinical privileging issues, including privileges for new procedures, locum tenens privileges, privileges that cross-specialty lines, and telemedicine privileges.

The Ever-Expanding Role of Advanced Practice Providers

Many states have expanded the scope of practice for advanced practice providers (APPs) to include more complicated procedures and more expansive responsibilities. Medical staff and hospital leaders are left with lots of questions: “How much responsibility should APPs be given?” “How much training is required first?” and “How much supervision is appropriate?” We’ll address these questions and provide practical guidance on credentialing APPs and the role of APPs on the medical staff.

Managing Behavior and Health Concerns

With patient safety being paramount in the delivery of care, hospitals often wrestle with how to address practitioner health concerns as well as behavior that undermines a culture of safety. Drawing on decades of experience, we’ll offer our favorite pearls of wisdom and provide advice on how to avoid the perilous pitfalls that lurk behind both the routine and the more exceptional behavioral and health challenges you may face.

Making the Most of References

Speaking with references can uncover invaluable information that isn’t reflected in an applicant’s credentialing file. We will share best practices for reaching out to peers. We will also offer tools for responding to reference requests for individuals who have had a checkered past at your institution.

Documenting the Credentialing Process

Keeping good minutes for committees involved in credentialing is essential to establishing a record and providing justification for the decisions that are made. We’ll discuss the “dos and don’ts for meeting minutes.”

Protecting Your Leaders and Your Organization

The law recognizes the importance of credentialing and provides significant legal protections. We’ll discuss what protections available for your leaders and your organization and the ways to preserve those protections. You’ll also come away with important language to include in your policies and application forms.

Granting Access to Credentials File

Managing requests from practitioners to view their credentials file can be tricky since the file contains both sensitive and non-sensitive information. We will discuss setting appropriate guardrails when granting access to this information.

System Credentialing

Many hospitals are now a part of a healthcare system and looking to coordinate their processes by developing rigorous, consistent standards that are applied across the system. We will provide you with tips and tools based on our work with health systems across the country in reshaping their credentialing and medical staff processes, such as moving to a system credentials committee.
